

Unveiling the Mystery of Christmas

The traditional narrative of Christmas often centers around the historical birth of Jesus Christ in Bethlehem. However, a deeper exploration reveals a spiritual reality that transcends the temporal and geographical confines of this event. The true mystery of Christmas lies not in the historical details but in the profound spiritual transformation that it symbolizes.

Luke's Gospel provides a foundational narrative for understanding the significance of Christmas. While the story of Jesus' birth is captivating, it serves as a prelude to the ultimate revelation: the awakening of the divine within each individual. The resurrection, often seen as the pinnacle of Jesus' life, is not merely a historical event but a symbolic representation of the spiritual rebirth that occurs within the soul.

The concept of being "born from above," as mentioned in John 3:3, is central to the spiritual understanding of Christmas. This rebirth is not a physical event but a spiritual transformation that occurs within the consciousness. It is a recognition of the divine spark that resides within each of us, waiting to be ignited.

The true Christmas message is not about a historical figure but about the awakening of this divine consciousness within ourselves. It is about recognizing that Jesus Christ is not an external savior but an inner reality, a spiritual presence that resides within each individual. The "hope of glory" mentioned by Paul in Colossians 1:26-27 is not a future event but a present reality that can be experienced through spiritual awakening.

The journey of salvation, as depicted in the Gospels, is not merely a historical narrative but a symbolic representation of the individual's spiritual evolution. It is a journey of self-discovery, a quest to awaken from the dream of the world and realize one's true nature as a divine being.

The "mystery hidden for ages" that Paul refers to is the realization of Christ within oneself. It is the understanding that the divine spark that ignited the universe also resides within each individual. The birth from above is not a singular event but a continuous process of awakening to this divine consciousness.

The true Christmas message is not about a historical event but about the realization of our divine nature. It is about awakening from the dream of the world and recognizing the Christ within. It is about understanding the unity of all beings and the manifestation of the divine mystery within ourselves.
